Abd Al Muttalib And his son Abdullah, father of the Prophet

THE JOURNEY OF A LIFETIME
WITH PROPHET MUHAMMAD
THE PROPHET OF ALLAH

The Vision of Abd Al Muttalib

Abd Al Muttalib whose given name was Shayba son of Hashim, was not an idolater, he directed his prayer to Allah alone and loved to be near the Ka'bah. It was because of this love that he would often have his mattress spread out in a place known as 'Hijr Ishmael' -- which is the place where Prophet Ishmael and his mother Lady Hagar lie buried and also where Prophet Ishmael used to pen his sheep -- and sleep there.

It was on one such night that he had a vision in which it was said to him, "Dig the sweet one." He asked, "What is the sweet one?" but there was no reply. The next morning he awoke with an overwhelming feeling of happiness and peace, the like of which he had never experience before, so he decided to spend the following night near Hijr Ishmael.

That night he had another vision in which the same voice told him, "Dig for mercy". He asked the meaning of it, but again there was no answer. When he returned to sleep there on the third night the vision came yet again but this time he was told, "Dig for the treasure." When Abd Al Muttalib asked what was meant by the treasure the vision vanished as before.

The vision came again on the fourth night, however this time the voice was more specific and told him to dig for Zamzam. Abd Al Muttalib asked about Zamzam, but unlike the previous occasions the voice answered saying, "Dig for it, you will have no regrets, it is your inheritance from your greatest ancestor." The voice told Abd Al Muttalib that Zamzam lay buried nearby and to supplicate to Allah for the continuous flow of pure water that would suffice all pilgrims. So he supplicated to Allah in the manner he was taught and at dawn he returned to his home to get a spade. His son Harith was there so he told him to fetch another spade and to come with him to dig for the well of Zamzam.

The Discovery of Zamzam

The sun had risen as they set to work digging. As the people started to rise and go about their daily chores and business they noticed Abd Al Muttalib and Harith digging away in the Sacred area and not long after a crowd started to gather to see what they were doing.

As much as the Meccans respected Abd Al Muttalib they felt he was going too far and told him he must stop desecrating the ground with his digging. Abd Al Muttalib refused and told his son to stand on guard to prevent anyone interfering with his digging. The digging progressed without an incident and the people began to tire of standing around and had started to disperse when to Abd Al Muttalib's great joy he struck the stone cover of the well of Zamzam. Immediately, he thanked Allah and the excited crowd regrouped around him.

News of his find spread quickly throughout Mecca and it wasn't long until a very large, joyous crowd had gathered to celebrate this great discovery.

The Treasure of Zamzam

Abd Al Muttalib and Harith removed the large stone cover from the forsaken well of Zamzam and as they did to the amazement of everyone, their eyes fell upon the treasure that had been taken from Ka'bah many centuries before when the Jurhumites had been driven from Mecca. There was great excitement and everyone laid claim to a share of the treasure.

In those days it was the practice of Meccans to use divining arrows and cast lots to settle major issues, with the ceremony taking place within the confines of Ka'bah before their chief idol Hubal. There were three stakes: one that the treasure should be returned to Ka'bah, another that it should be retained by Abd Al Muttalib, and the third that the treasure be divided between the tribes.
