Freedom from the Bondage of Addiction Lisa S.

Lisa's journey of addiction took her to jails, institutions, mental hospitals, psychiatrists, counselors, rehabs, and wanted the ultimate defeat of death. Despite a series of catastrophic events, she continued to give in to the enemy of addiction over and over again. As long as she could remember, she had felt alienated and disconnected from everyone and everything else around her. The disease of addiction told her that when she felt lonely, or tired, or stressed out, it would always be there for her to take away all the pain. She spent her whole life looking to fill a void that she did not understand, using alcohol to fill it. It took the loss of decades of her life and one incredible counselor to discover what that void was and to begin the amazing journey to sobriety.
