We have two choices. We can grow up or we can self-destruct.

As tender as it is gritty, this insightful coming of age story about two women who find themselves at difficult crossroads is a brazen and provocative narrative about what it means to grow up, to love, and to heal.

Sometimes heartbreaking, often humorous, and always honest, this series will make you nostalgic for the inexperience of youth and hopeful for the journey that follows.

*Warning: this contemporary women's fiction series is intended for a mature audience due to adult situations, dark content, and explicit language.
