Do you know that about 70% lottery winners end up in bankruptcy...approximately 7 years after they became millionaires?

This number is derived from an official research conducted by economists at University of Kentucky, University of Pittsburgh, and Vanderbilt University in the United States.

“Money Creates Happiness” and “More Money is The Solution” are commonly heard, but if those adages are true...

...then why the 70% rate of bankruptcy? These guys won millions!

There are people who seem to be able to squeeze every inch of juice from the orange they have (think David Beckham and Donald Trump) and there are people who managed to make millions even billions only to lose them all (think M.C. Hammer or Allen Iverson).

Therefore more money can't be the answer. It must be something else. It must be intangible.
