INVECTIVE is a book that that screams out loud: “READ ME NOW!”

You need to read this book if you might love the USA, or hate the USA, or simply do not understand the USA.

Here is an excerpt:

And the people of the USA whine: There are no jobs. And my answer is simple: There are millions of people in foreign countries around the World being employed right now to work for American companies. So, you Americans, stop attacking Islam, stop hating foreigners, stop trying to build a fence to protect your jobs, and get out there and compete in the global job market for all the outsourced jobs we lost because we were not competitive enough to keep them here. It is called capitalism. Look it up, and learn it. We need to be competitive, we need to be better, we need to be smarter and more educated, we need to give the companies a reason to hire us, and then millions of jobs will be created. Indeed, there are bridges to build! There are ghettos to clean up and reconstruct. We need new roads. There are products to manufacture. There are internet applications to be written. There are forests to be replanted. There is so much work to do! We are not entitled. We need to work. Do some work. Any amount helps.

Seriously, the American jobs were not outsourced to foreign lands because the corporate conglomerates are evil. No, the jobs were lost because the people of the USA failed to be competitive. We have become so fat and so lazy and so filled with hatred that we have forgotten what it means to compete.

On the cover of this eBook, there is a photograph of a little plant, growing out of petrified wood. You can see the little hole in the rock, which collected rainwater. Somehow, the little seed fell into the hole, and then the rain allowed the little seed to grow into a plant. This little plant grew as fast as it could, for as long as it could. The plant was hoping that it could buy enough time and cheat death long enough to produce a flower, and make more seeds, before it would wither away and die. This little nature scene took place in late September in Scottsdale, Arizona, and the afternoon temperature on that day was one hundred two degrees on the Fahrenheit scale. The heavy rain had fallen the week before. However, there was no soil to capture the moisture. Over the next month the precipitation was zero. The plant did not survive. My point here is that the life of this plant was terminal, it ended, and it ended soon. And yet, the plant put up a good fight. It lived long enough to allow me to find it and take its photo, so that I can give you the following lesson. You see, the plant struggled, but it did not complain. It did not ask for welfare. It did not ask for unemployment insurance. The plant did not beg its government for handouts. The plant did not beg for lower taxes. The plant did not moan and groan about how unfair the world is, and the plant did not ask for a fence to be built so that it could protect its territory. Instead, the little plant worked at its task of living. It was a fighter, a beautiful proud fighter, who lived the best life that it could, within the parameters of its own existence.

Look, we are all going to die. Most of us are going to die sooner than we want. The question is whether we are going to create any beauty before we go. I say it is time we stop the ugliness, and it is time we create the beauty. We need to respect other people, all over the world, like we ourselves want to be respected. It all starts with respect. And, where should this respect begin? I already told you, above. We cannot respect ourselves when we allow our children to be sick, and when we allow our Veterans to be sick. We should be ashamed of what we are, and we need to change who we are. We have no business making judgments on foreign people when we ourselves have plenty of money to give the best health care to our children and our Veterans and we simply choose no
